AFTER THE MEETING. After the meeting in Leavenworth between the mother and entidren, the Chronice goes on to say:

Fine Work.

At the merble yards of Messrs, Burdett & Heis, in this city, we had the pleasure yesterday of existening some of the finest speciments of work ever set up in this state. A medaliton of Presid at Lincoln, in marble, by the junior member of the first, is a piece of artistle werk manning that will bear critical existing the process, all finesy executed by the same artist, But we intend of more especially to speak of articles in the practical and useful line. They have just set up about half a dozen mantles which are as the as any to be found anywhere. These articles are made of slate, glazed in imitation of mobre by a patent process, are as durable as the stone itself, and just as handsome in apparance, being such a complete imitation that he eye can distinguish the artificial from the genuine. They have the advantage of being much cheaper than the natural stone—creating only one-thind as much—and what he astill gracer advantage, they cannot be stained by any substance. Considering the questions of cost, durability, and handsome appearance, we are forced to conclude that the artificial marble, for all house intraishing use, is decidedly preferable to the natural stone. There are a large numconcluse that the artificial marble, for an house turnishing use, as decidedly preferable to the natural stone. There are a large number of fine residences in Leavenworth, as well as in other cities of the State, that might be decidedly improved in their interior appearance, at a very small cost, by the introduction of work of this ci anacter. WELL SHOW OUR LOYALTY.

Constables Weir and Freligh made a dive among the defunct law, and head breakers, and arrested the whole outfit, and brought them before Justice

Purcel, of this city, who placed them under bonds until a proper investigation of the whole affair can be had. No doubt the outside world will think Weir City a grand opening for missionary temperance work.

Our political fellows have been honored with a visit by no less a distinguished personage than the Hon. Sidney Clarke, of Lawrence. Well, its no use to disguise the fact, but Sid was down here looking up his chances for Congress in the coming contest. Now, we dislike to discourage any man is a landable enterprise, or his own thirst for official position, but to be frank and candid with Mr. Clark, we advise him to keep off of the neutral land for backing. While we admire Sid as a whole souled, ood natured, shrewd politic'an, yet we cannot abandon Hon D. C. Haskell. We are in the midst of a great political current, and the pasteaches us it is no place to "swap horses." The Republicans of this county are a unit for the Hon. John A.
